Building Healthy School Environments: Curb Mobile Food Vending to Students

No one should profit at the expense of children's health. In communities across our state, mobile food vendors are using the portability of their businesses to specifically and intentionally target students near school campuses. As these photos help illustrate, vendors congregate before, during, and after the school day to sell soda, chips, and a host of other unhealthy items.

Limiting mobile vending near schools helps:

- Ensure safe, healthy school environments;
- Support past and present efforts to improve school nutrition; and
- Foster students' long-term health and success through proper nutrition.
